The plotting and narrative drive ebbs and flows, and it does a reasonable job of keeping the old fans entertained and providing something relatively conventional for readers new to the perverse charms of Ballard. From the reviews, it does seem to be the strongest of the trilogy, Super-Cannes, Millennium People and Cocaine Nights.

"Super-Cannes" seems to be a reboot of Ballard's previous novel, "Cocaine Nights". When I finished it, I re-read my review of "Cocaine Nights" and was surprised at how much of it could be applied equally to this work, with only minimal adjustment. "CN" is set in an expatriate community on the Spanish coast of the Mediterranean.

Super-Cannes is a literary Art novel. The plot is an imaginary, and dark, exploration about rewarding merit-based achievements with opportunities to unleash racism and class cruelty. I think this is a terribly flawed story; however, I keep see-sawing between three or four stars.
